A Message From Our CEO

Dear (insert customer name),

All over the world books are being banned because people feel they are inappropriate. Books are objects filled with knowledge that are meant to be shared, and it should be up to the reader if they would like to read a book or not. It is not the job of the government or others in a high-power position to dictate a person's right to read what they choose, and their right to read in privacy as outlined in the U.S. Constitution. Penguin Random House is partnering with the National Coalition Against Censorship (NCAC) to fight for free expression and end book banning for good. To show your support on this issue donate today. The NCAC is a non-profit organization that relies completely on donations from people just like you, who support their mission to defend the right to think, create and explore.
